

Neil M. Rofsky, M.D., FACR

Neil Rofsky, M.D., FACR, is Professor and Chair of UT Southwestern's Department of Radiology and holder of the Effie and Wofford Cain Distinguished Chair in Diagnostic Imaging. Dr. Rofsky also serves as Co-Director of Translational Research for the Advanced Imaging Research Center (AIRC), a collaboration of UT Southwestern and the University of Texas at Dallas. A native of New York, Dr. Rofsky received his medical degree from New York Medical College and then completed an internship in internal medicine at Middlesex University Hospital. He received advanced training through a nuclear medicine fellowship program at the University of Utah Medical Center; a radiology residency program at the New York University Medical Center; and fellowships in abdominal imaging and magnetic resonance imaging at New York University Medical Center.